

DICTIONARY LEARNING: PERFORMANCE THROUGH CONSISTENCY

Tilo Sloboda sloboda@ira.uka.de

Interactive Systems Laboratories

University of Karlsruhe — Germany

Carnegie Mellon University — USA

lly

2. DICTIONARY LEARNING

Will give an outline of two algorithms for Dictionary Learning that improve the recog ations. In the first experiment (A1) we generated alternative pronunciations which don't result in homophones in the dictionary. In the second experiment (A2) we a ally used the phoneme confusi which diffe

REFERENCES

- [1] Douglas O' Shaughnessy: Correcting Complex False Starts in Spontaneous Speech, Proceedings of the ICASSP 1994, Adelaide, volume 1, pp 349-352.
- [2] Tanja Schultz, Ivica Rogina: Acoustic and Language Modeling of Human and Nonhuman Noises for Human-to-Human Spontaneous Speech Recognition, Proceedings of the ICASSP 1995.
- [3] B. Suhm, M. Wószczyńska, A. Wąbrowicz: Transcription of New Words in Spontaneous Speech, Proceedings of the ICASSP 1995.
- [4] L.